

RECCARED, king of the Visigoths,
He abandoned Arianism for Orthodox Christianity.

Arianism died out, leading to development of ~~ecclesiastical~~ ecclesiastical ascendancy, and rivalry of the Churchmen and nobles.

Leovigild's son Reccard, during his father's life gave no hint of the revolutionary project which he inaugurated immediately after the old king's death.

Reccard, without showing any hostility to Arianism announced his own acceptance of the Catholic Creed, and induced many of the nobles to follow his example. Like Theodoric in Italy, he made no distinction between Catholic and Arian and in the course of a generation Arianism practically disappeared.
